POLITICO-FINANCIAL GYMNASTICS.

Considering the burden of inconsistency and hypocrisy under which the Bangor Commercial is laboring in the exposure of its course, from the indorsement of the Augusta specie-payment platform in June to its present shameless championship of the Ohio repudiation doctrines, we can only infer that some mischievous person procured the insertion of that editorial paragraph in its columns on Saturday, calling up remembrance of its remarkable financial somersaults about two years ago. In the latter stage of the financial and commercial panic of 1873 our contemporary, which now emulates the unfortunate William Allen in howling against the "bullionists," was seized with the brilliant idea that specie payments should be instantly resumed. On the 4th of October under the caption of "The Auspicious Moment" it vociferated, "The people have had warning enough. Let them now be wise in time. Let specie payment be resumed, let it be resumed now!" Four days later it broke out again in another spot with the conundrum "Is a return to specie possible?" which it proceeded to answer emphatically in the negative. Five days later it had another spasm, veering to its first point and declaring that "the first step is to return to specie payment" rather than to await the final and inevitable catastrophe." From that time forth the Commercial gave out occasional hysterical utterances, now on one side and now on the other, and subsided into an uncertain state until it was called upon to indorse the hard money platform of Augusta last June, which it did without a word of dissent or gratification.

It managed to preserve a tolerably discreet silence during our State campaign, although unable to conceal its sympathy with the Ohio repudiationists, but immediately after the defeat of Roberts it began to urge the evils of a return to specie payments, and finally came out flat-footed in support of the doctrines which the World denounces as "madness, if it was not treason, treason if it was not madness." Being treason it would afford a strong claim to our contemporary's support, and he has exhibited madness enough since 1861 to warrant sympathy with any crazy project for ruining the credit of the country. He upholds and commends what the Democratic Courier-Journal designates as "the folly if not the crime, of those loud-mouthed charlatans, the mean tricksters and the shallow-hearted and shallow-headed idiots who tempted Providence as recklessly and brazenly as did the devil and glorifies the persons thus described as noble chieftains" and "great statesmen."

And now, while the intelligence and honesty of the whole country are rejoicing over the defeat of the Ohio "madness or treason," the editor who applauded Pendleton's greenback heresies in 1868 who clamored during the panic of 1873, one day for instant return to specie and the next day that such a return was impossible, who indorsed a platform last June declaring for "steps toward specie payment and no step backward," now champions the repudiated repudiation doctrines of the Ohio demagogues, and approvingly quotes the Cincinnati Enquirer which declares that the legal tender currency shall be inflated and threatens the hard money Democrats of the East as follows

The men in New York calling themselves Democrats, who have exerted their influence to beat William Allen and the Democratic ticket in Ohio are the worst enemies of our organization. They have dug a pit between them and the Democracy of this portion of the Union—a pit as wide and impassable as that which separates Dives from Lazarus. We only know the motives of their leaders to hate and execrate them and to pray for their defeat. They are not Democrats any more than Nick Biddle, of the days of Andrew Jackson was a Democrat. The god of their idolatry is a national bank. They have set up a golden calf to be worshipped by the people whom they have robbed and are robbing. The Democracy of the United States have an account to settle with them.

This is against the Democracy of New York, and the Commercial, which denounces them and the Massachusetts Democrats for declaring against irrational repudiation claims party affiliation only with the corrupt faction which has just been rebuked in Ohio. And such is a "hard money" Democratic organ in Maine!

TAMMANY "HOME RULE."

(From the N. Y. Evening Post.)

The Republicans last evening nominated John K. Hackett for Recorder, and there is no doubt that their candidate will be adopted by the other opponents of Tammany Hall. We trust there is as little doubt that the citizens of New York will re-elect Mr. Hackett by an emphatic majority. The Tammany newspaper, at the end of a column of praise of Mr. John Kelley's judicial ticket, says:

"Those who undertake to quarrel with 'Tammany' or with John Kelly, whose influence is justly so great among the leaders of Tammany, for nominations such as these, may as well understand at once that they gnaw a file."

Base as is the subserviency betrayed in this slavish paragraph, it is of value because it presents a fair and open challenge. We hope that the citizens of New York will accept it promptly. If it be true that John Kelly's "influence is justly so great" that he must be allowed to nominate candidates for a party which usually casts the heavier vote in this city, we may as well meet at once this question. Is his "influence" also "so great" that for him to name his men is to put them in office? We should be very sorry to believe that a majority of the voters of New York would accept a condition of practical political slavery which the Tammany newspaper accepts without the slightest flush of shame.

The N. Y. Herald says: "The result in Newark is bound to have a most important effect on the election in the State next month. To begin with, it has given the Democracy everywhere a staggering blow. A few days ago there was a fierce strife in Essex county for the Democratic shrievalty nomination. Since Tuesday several of the most prominent aspirants have announced themselves out of the canvass."

"They say in Indiana that, while Gov. Hendricks was speaking in Portsmouth, Ohio, one day last week, he was much disturbed by the wrangling and quarrels of drunken men among his hearers, and at last, with patience utterly exhausted, he [illegible]

THOSE "CHICKENS."

Our Bourbon contemporary, since the sweeping Republican victories in the West last Tuesday, has sadly neglected the political poultry on which it bestowed so much attention up to the very day of the elections, and instead of publishing hourly bulletines from the "coops" a melancholy silence gives the only hint at the condition of "those birds." It is said that even the jovial General Butler is losing faith in Democratic roosters and that jocose inquiries as to the health of his pets now fail to bring any responsive smile upon his statesmanlike countenance. The truth seems to be that our impulsive and sanguine young neighbors were somewhat reckless in their poultry investments and now find themselves with a stock on hand unsaleable at any price and so sadly afflicted with Ohio pip that not a bird is fit for exhibition. In the early stages of the canvass a number of ambitious chickens were let loose from the Commercial coop, which are now flying home to roost, among them the following

Morton says that he is hopeful of Ohio. So he was two years ago, until old Bill Allen put his heavy paw on him and squelched him.—Commercial, Aug. 20.

Appearances indicate that some one has put a "heavy paw" upon the venerable William Let's see, who was squelched in Ohio last Tuesday?

Brother Simpson, of the Belfast Journal, advertises his magnificent rooster to appear again immediately after the Ohio election.—Commercial, Sept. 16

The "magnificent rooster" has failed to make his appearance.—Gone to weep with William Allen.

The Republicans of Iowa have become alarmed at their prospects in that State, and have summoned ex-Secretary Harlan home to take the stump.—Commercial, Sept. 9

That majority of between 30,000 and 40,000 shows how "alarmed" the Iowa Republicans must have been.

Senator Thurman says it is no longer a question of victory or defeat for the Democracy, but a question of how great the Democratic majority shall be.—Commercial, Sept. 18

When Thurman finds out how large the "Democratic majority" was, we hope he will "make a note on't" for the benefit of our neighbor

Yes, let Schurz go to Ohio by all means. He helped the Democracy of Missouri last fall by opposing them. Send along Charles Francis Adams with him. The Buckeye State, with old Bill Allen at her head has stomach for them all.—Commercial, Sept. 30.

We have an impression that Mr. Schurz did "go to Ohio" and perhaps our contemporary can tell us who was swallowed by that campaign.

On the 13th of October we shall publish another column in regard to the aforesaid "Roaring Bill Allen," which will disgust our troubled contemporary more than anything we have printed yet. It will be a column of majorities and they will be mostly on one side, too.—Commercial, Sept. 20

There does seem to be a one-sidedness about the majorities, but our neighbor does not manifest great pride in displaying them and instead of being "disgusted" we are exceedingly pleased with the figures

We hope the Commercial will tenderly receive and care for these unhappy little chickens, thrust forth prematurely into a depressing atmosphere, and now coming back to the roost with draggled plumage and glazing eyes. And in this connection we may quote the following statement in the N. Y. World concerning the "sensation despatches" with which the Commercial attempted to do a little "jobbing" on Thursday evening, by suppressing the later and more trustworthy news in its possession.

The sensation despatches sent from Cincinnati yesterday were evidently intended to enable some of the speculators who had been backing the beaten candidate to hedge out a little of their losses. The plan worked admirably in this city, both of the pool rooms being crowded late in the afternoon and early evening, when a number of pools were sold on the result

MEETING OF EASTERN RAILROAD DIRECTORS. A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Eastern Railroad Company was held in Boston Friday, Messrs. Nathaniel Hooper and John Cummings being absent. Messrs. Lawrence, Wooldredge, Williams, Bates, Haven, Johnson and Jones were in attendance. A proposition was received from Mr George Bachelder, Superintendent, wherein it is claimed that $25,000 per month can be saved in the running expenses of the road, without interfering with the management or employes of the engineers' departments. A project was broached to the effect that the Board take the Eastern Railroad ten-years' notes and Maine Central stock as collateral security, and then indorse individually notes of the Eastern Railroad Company, for the purpose of raising $1,000,000 for use in liquidating the immediate liabilities of the company. It has since been intimated that a reduction is to be effected on the Maine Central road by a change in the civil engineering department. No definite action was taken by the Board in any respect, and after a general consideration of affairs an adjournment was had

The State Executive Committee of the Republican party of Mississippi has issued an address to the Republicans of that State. We make the following extract

"The mask being off, and there being no longer a motive to deceive, the present canvass opens up with unusual bitterness and severity. Grown desperate by repeated defeats, reckless political leaders, who would again plunge the State into ruin to promote themselves, have incited the more ignorant and lawless of their party to arm themselves, and use their arms in the conflict.

Vicksburg, Clinton, Yazoo City, Amite, Tallahatchie and Noxubee counties bear ample witness to the character of the present campaign. But we are not discouraged. It cost the Government of the United States a million of lives and untold millions of money to secure to a large majority of the Republicans of Mississippi the right to vote. Rest assured that that sacred investment of blood and treasure will be looked after, and millions more will be expended, if necessary, to preserve that right."

General Rutherford B. Hayes, who has just been elected a third time Governor of Ohio, was a gallant soldier during the war and gained his honors and epaulets by solid service in the field. Near the close of the war, while at the front, Gen. Hayes was notified of his nomination as Republican candidate for Congress in the Second Ohio District, against Geo. H. Pendleton, and was requested to come home and take part in the electioneering. His reply was as follows

"IN CAMP ——.

"Yours of — is received. Thanks! I have other business just now. Any man who would leave the army at this time to electioneer for Congress or any other place ought to be scalped. Yours,

"R. B. HAYES."

He was triumphantly elected, served four years in Congress after the close of the war, and in 1867 was elected Governor of the State, defeating Allen G. Thurman and reelected in 1869 over his old competitor Pendleton. His third election as Governor, after one of the sharpest political bat- [illegible]

the Republican loss, or in other words that Republicans enough stayed away from the polls last year to have defeated Mr. Tilden by more than seven thousand majority. If, therefore, the vote of the State could be as fully brought out in New York as it was in Ohio, the Republican party would have a chance to be equally victorious." And the Herald is not a Republican paper.

THE E. & N. A. RAILWAY AFFAIRS.

BANGOR, Oct. 16, 1875.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier

We have now to consider the rights, powers and best interests of the holders of the land grant bonds of this corporation amounting to $1,986,000 secured by a mortgage of its railway from Bangor to Vanceboro, not including its wharves and depot buildings in Bangor and its right to a perpetual lease of the Bangor & Piscataquis Railroad, and subject to the prior mortgage to the city of Bangor on the road from Bangor to Winn. This security is now held by two trustees for the benefit of these bondholders. Whatever rights and powers they have are to be preserved and exercised by and through the two trustees now in office or by their successor to be chosen by the bondholders at a regular meeting called for the purpose and subsequently confirmed by the Supreme Court.

In due time at such a meeting a majority in interest of all the bondholders present in person or by proxy may determine whether the trustees shall take possession of the road and manage and run it in their behalf, and on the application of bondholders to the amount of $662,000 the trustees must give the statute notice of a foreclosure.

Twenty four sections of chapter 51 of the Revised Statutes are used to express and define the rights, powers and liabilities of trustees and bondholders of railroads. The two provisions I have named are the most important. The others are mainly relating to details which become important when one or the other of these two courses have been adopted by the bondholders.

Should the bondholders direct the trustees to take possession there would still be a question of great interest to be settled as to this particular road. Some legal proceeding would be necessary in case the Company refuse to surrender the control of the road and interpose all the objections they may offer to such a procedure, and some intimations have already been given that those who will hereafter have the right to vote as stockholders will not quietly and graciously permit the trustees to have all their own way in this matter, and as after the trustees shall have taken possession and have assumed the management of the road they will have all the rights and powers and be subject to all the obligations of the directors and corporation of the road it may not be easy to find competent men willing to act as such trustees. The statute is particular in stating what the trustees may do in the matter of receipts and expenditures. Any surplus of receipts over the necessary repairs they are to apply according to the rights of parties under the mortgage. Nothing can be used from the receipts to prevent the sacrifice of property. That which the mortgage covers may be protected and saved, what it does not cover must be abandoned. To take possession of the whole road the trustees must first pay the interest due the city, so that, at the outset thirty thousand dollars would have to be paid for the privilege of running the road from Bangor to Winn, supposing the Company to surrender their right without a contest. Should there be a contest for the possession, there may be a much larger sum due the city to be paid before the control of the road will pass to the trustees.

Should holders of bonds to the amount of $662,000 apply to the trustees to foreclose the mortgage, they must do so, in which case, if the coupons are not paid seasonably, the road and all its property covered by the mortgage not held by the city will pass to the bondholders who will constitute a new corporation; the bondholder will become a stockholder, to take his chances for a dividend from his stock, and with a liability to be assessed for the purpose of paying the first mortgage to the city. The trouble and liability to loss might be stated at more length if it were necessary. But I think enough has been said to cause the bondholders to shrink from unnecessarily interfering with the management of this road.

One other consideration may as well be named here—that is, what effect will a contest for the possession of the road, or a foreclosure of the mortgage have upon the market value of the bonds. Very few people count upon holding them until they mature. The readiness with which this kind of property can be converted into money makes a considerable part of its value. Should it be understood that the payment of the coupons is dependent upon the successful management of trustees, or that the bonds were to be converted into assessible railroad stock, there would be but the few who should be best acquainted with the condition of the road and its management who would venture to buy them; and those few would pay only their own prices.

With a glance at the other side of the picture I will close.

By consenting to a postponement of one-half of the interest on the funded debt under proper precautions taken to ensure that the company's property shall be preserved and the road kept in efficient condition and strengthened, it will be made the interest of the unsecured creditors to do what they can to secure the prosperity of the company, necessarily closely dependent upon the good condition of the mortgaged property. It may be safely assumed that they will do their best to save their debts which they may hope to realize only by first securing the solvency and financial success of the debtor.

It is a singular feature on the aspect of this case, that few or none believe the creditors will fail in obtaining their pay at some time if they are allowed to carry out their plan. It seems to be ignored that the source from which their payments must come, is the value and efficient condition of the mortgaged property, by their management to be made valuable and profitable for the benefit of the funded debt primarily, except such interest as creditors hope to receive after the lapse of three years and which cannot exceed three per cent. unless the road shall be so productive that a larger interest can be paid to all classes of creditors. I have heard it said by one bondholder that he is in principle opposed to allowing a first security to be postponed for the benefit of a second, as though it could never be for the best interest of a creditor to consult and advance the prosperity of his debtor. It would be sad if such a narrow motive should be allowed an influence in the settlement of questions of this magnitude.

I have heard reason given, why, if allowed to get the control of this company's [illegible]

Gov Allen is disposed to be philosophical. He thinks the money power has wrenched him from the arms of the people. Oblivious of the fact that the night before election he predicted his success by 40,000 majority, he now talks in this way. "He always realized the force of the gigantic Money Power which was arrayed against him, and did not consider its success impossible. Yet he believed and still believes that if the real opinion of the people could be obtained his election by a large majority would have been assured. The principles for which he battled must eventually be crowned with success."

On Tuesday, November 9th, nine more States will hold their elections as follows: Virginia, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania. The Republicans will give a good account of themselves in most of them.

The Lewiston cotton mills are successfully competing with English manufacturers for the trade of China. They can sell their goods cheaper and furnish a better article than the English. The Journal says the Chinese prefers the American goods to the English, having found them to be reliable, with less cheating in, their manufacture.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

The Democrats say of the Republican majority in Ohio as Mercutio did of his death wound "'Tis not so deep as a well nor so wide as a church door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve."

Vice-President Wilson is in the city, on his way to Washington. He says that the Republicans in Massachusetts will give an immense majority for Rice, and have not been as harmonious and united for many years past. He regards the Republican victory in Ohio as the precursor of a national victory in 1876.—New York Mail.

The New York Mail says:

"Had Hayes received the majority which Brough had in 1863 we might infer that Democratic inflationism was killed. But we cannot forget that even after that stunning verdict of 100,000 majority against Copperheadism, a Copperhead plank was put in the Chicago platform despite all the protests of Dean Richmond, who was as powerful then as Tilden is now."

Tarbox thinks the Democrats deserve credit at least for trying to get a man not much tainted with Democracy to help pull them through. So they do, John, and he deserves credit for refusing.—Lowell Courier.

The New York Times says that the Democracy of New York State are badly divided, and that the inflationists are beginning to show themselves.

The best practical illustration yet given of the foolishness of inflation was made public at Terre Haute a few days ago. While a cheap-money man and "friend of the people" was hard at work trying to organize a greenback club and to convince the people that they needed more money, it was announced that a national bank in the same city thought of reducing its circulation one hundred thousand dollars because it had to pay taxes upon that amount of money which was lying idle in its vaults.—Christian Union.

The New York World calls the inflation folly of the Ohio Democracy, "Madness, if it was not treason; treason, if it was not madness."

The New York Times has conferred a new title upon Sam Bowles. It speaks of him as as "the Great Nominator," "who has nominated more unsuccessful candidates than any other man alive."

DECLINE IN THE MASSACHUSETTS LUMBER TRADE. The Herald says the annual report of Mr. George W Cram, the Massachusetts Surveyor-General of lumber, for the year ending Sept. 30, 1875, shows a marked decrease in the trade over the previous year. His district includes the county of Suffolk, the city of Cambridge and the town of Brighton, and some idea of the decline may be gathered from the fact that in 1873 the fees of the deputy-surveyors amounted to $60,283.83; in 1874, $50,257.86, and for the present year, $31,466. The fees of the Surveyor-General have declined from $6,026.41 in 1873 to $3,140.13 the present year. Mr. Cram has been in the lumber trade for 35 years, and states that he has never seen such a general stagnation in the trade before.

AFFAIRS IN SPAIN. A letter from Madrid published in the Boston Journal makes a horrible revelation of the condition of affairs in Spain. The young King Alfonso has plunged into dissipation, and is following the course of his corrupt mother. His licentiousness, followed by a series of assassinations for the purpose of aggrandizement, has aroused the hatred of the populace, even in corrupt Madrid; [illegible] handbills are passing, [illegible] and the people are ripe for revolt. "MAGGIE MITCHELL." The announcement that the popular favorite, "Maggie Mitchell" is to play "Lorle, or the Artist's Dream," in Norombega, to-night is sufficient to fill the house, as the plan at Bugbee's shows. The play is highly spoken of by such papers as the Boston Journal Advertiser, Providence Journal, etc., and the acting role assumed by the lady affords many opportunities for the delineation of the various moods of childhood, its artless simplicity and innocence, which she portrays with that perfection of art that seems not art, but nature. On Friday next she will play "Jane Eyre."

GOLDEN WEDDING. On Friday evening last the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Snow, of Hampden, was celebrated at the home of the aged couple by a large gathering of their relatives and friends, among the former being Mr. and Mrs. Spofford, of Philadelphia, and Mr. and Mrs. Farr, of Washington, D. C. A poem entitled "Fifty Years Ago" was read by Rev. Mr. Dunn, and after other appropriate exercises the remainder of the evening was spent in social converse. The presents were numerous and valuable, and all who participated united in wishing that the years may pass lightly over the heads of the still hale and honored couple whose married life has been so blest.

A SAD AND FATAL ACCIDENT occurred at Stetson recently, which adds another to the many terrible happenings from careless handling of fire arms. It seems that a young lad, son of Cyrus Emerson, had been taught by some young men to discharge a pistol at various objects when loaded only with powder, and one morning overhearing them talk about its being loaded and left on a shelf in the pantry, he obtained it, intending to frighten his mother by discharging it near her. Mrs. Emerson was at the time holding her infant, aged five months, and the little boy pointed the pistol directly at the mother and child, fired and the charge of buckshot, with which the weapon happened to be loaded, struck both, instantly killing the infant. The shock to the family was a terrible one.

"Studying over the returns to-day it is obvious that inflation did make some inroads upon the Republicans in the back counties where newspapers circulate but little, where the standard of education is lower, and where the Republican speakers had least opportunity to work effectively. The significant fact is, that the fight was won in the cities, the larger towns, and the populous, intelligent counties, where daily newspapers, good schools and speakers like Schurz, Garfield and Woodford got in their best work. Nothing but the elaborate work of educating the people on financial questions, done by the Republicans during the past three months, has saved the State. Had the election been held on the 1st of September Allen would have won by 30,000. Hard money has won in Ohio by the skin of its teeth, but what it has gained is secure. Another campaign here on the same issue would make our present little majority a crushing one."

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP, SCHENCK'S SEA WEED TONIC, SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS, are the only medicines that will cure Pulmonary Consumption.

Frequently medicines that will stop a cough will occasion the death of the patient; they lock up the liver, stop the circulation of the blood, hemorrhage follows, and in fact, they clog the action of the very organs that caused the cough.

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia are the causes of two-thirds of the cases of Consumption. Many persons complain of a dull pain in the side, constipation, coated tongue, pain in the shoulder-blade, feelings of drowsiness and restlessness, the food lying heavily on the stomach, accompanied with acidity and belching up of wind.

THE GOLDEN WEDDING.

BY ANNA BOYNTON.

[The following beautiful poem, which we copy from the Piscataquis Observer, was composed for and read at the celebration of the Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. George V. Edes, at Mayo's Hall, Dover, Wednesday evening, Oct. 13.]

Here in the mild October day,
While golden leaves are on the sward,
Clear golden chimes begin to play
Within our hearts in sweet accord.

And wedding bells from far away,
Are ringing down the years' steeps,
Binding a past and present day,
That fifty autumns fall between.

And many friends are gathering here,
To honor worth and love and truth
In faithful hearts that many a year
Have kept the honest vows of youth.

For now their Indian Summer falls,
With gold of leaf and ripened grain,
And sunlight o'er the low, home walls,
Wherein calm joys for age remain.

A Golden Wedding.—It is well;
The gold of many hallowed years
Is in these lives where sorrows fell,
And ripened virtues with her tears.

Six hundred mellow moons have shed
Soft radiance on their wedded way:
Ten thousand days of sun have fed
The gladness that doth decay.

Then ring, O bells,—your lost refrain,
'Mid louder songs is sweet to hear
Would that the world of greed and gain
Might pause and learn your meaning clear.

Might learn, that kindly, honest loves,
In quiet homes by hill and lea,
Send out a silent force that moves
The world as Luna moved the sea.

That faded hair and toil-worn hands,
And kind old faces pass away,
And we, upon their ancient lands
Rise up and toil from day to day,

But that their silent work of love
Is like a circle in the sea,
And widens ever, 'till above
'Tis merged in God's eternity

Then ring, prophetic bells, and tell
Of peaceful winter yet to be;
Ring out life's year, and rise and swell,
To blend with Heaven's melody.

A WAISTED LIFE.

"I have tickets for the concert to-night, Abba," said James Henley coming into the sitting-room, where his wife was running a sewing machine with a busy whirr.

"Oh, James, how I wish I could go!"

The light died away from her husband's face in a second.

"Wish you could go, Abba! Why, of course you will go."

"I can't James. I must finish these three dresses before Sunday, and it will take every minute."

"Three dresses!"

"For Jennie, Susie and Lotta. It is Easter Sunday, you know, and all the spring things are ready but these dresses."

"But this is only Wednesday."

"I know, James; but look at the work. There are overskirts to each, and ruffles on all the waists. Jennie has three flounces."

"I suppose it is useless for me to repeat what I have said so often, Abba, that you are foolish in your choice of work. Little girls do not require the finery you put upon your children."

"But all the children in the congregation are well dressed, James. You cannot afford to put the sewing out so I must do it."

"Let the children dress more simply, then. Come, Abba, stop that buzz for once and go to this concert. I think we can all survive the disgrace if the children wear some of the dresses they have on Sunday. It is so seldom any really good music is in our reach at L——, that I hate to miss hearing it."

"Can't you go?"

"And leave you? I should not enjoy it if I knew you were stitching here. Come!"

With a heavy sigh, as if James was exacting a sacrifice, instead of giving her a pleasure Abba left the room, and went to her own apartment to dress for the concert. While she dressed she was calculating closely the time she must save to make up for her evening of pleasure. By rising an hour earlier and retiring an hour later, she might be able to finish the dainty silks that were to excite the envy of all the mothers of L——on Sunday. All through the evening, while her husband drank in the sweet sounds in which he delighted, Abba with her face all polite interest, was thinking of the unfinished work.

"Was it not delightful?" James said, as they walked home in the soft spring moonlight.

"Delightful! I am so glad I went, James. Mrs. Gordon had on her new spring suit, and her dresses all come from New York. The trimming on her basque is quite new style, and I am sure I can put Jennie's on in the same way."

So the talk went on, and the sewing machine whirred for two hours after James slept, so that Abba might not forget how the trimming was put upon the new basque she had seen.

Sunday morning shone clear and cloudless. Mrs. Henley had put the last stitch into Lotta's dress as the clock struck twelve and she awakened with a pain in her chest and a headache, but with a feeling of triumph. Her children would wear their new spring suits, that had cost nothing but the material.

Nothing! Mrs. Henley did not estimate the hours spent over the machine, the weariness, the neglect of many little duties. There had been no actual money laid out for dressmaking, so it was clear gain of material.

Very pretty the children looked when they were ready for church. Jennie and Susie, twins of ten years old were dressed alike in delicate pearl color, trimmed with blue, and hats of the newest shape with blue ribbons. Lotta wore cerise color with cerise trimming, for Lotta was a brunette of seven.

The charges at starting for Sunday school were:

"Be sure you lift your overskirts when you sit down, don't lean back upon the streamers of your hats, and walk where you will not soil your light boots. Don't strain your gloves, and lift your flounces when you kneel down."

"It is such a relief that they are all dressed," said Abba, as the children started, their little parasols jauntily held, and their whole air showing their own appreciation of their new finery.

"Over dressed, Abba!" was the reply. "Your own dresses are not more elaborate."

"It is the fashion now to cut children's dresses like ladies'. But you ought to be proud of your children, James. Everybody compliments me upon the taste with which I dress them."

"Abba!" Mr. Henley said suddenly, leading his wife to a mirror. "Look at your own face."

"Well!" she said, wondering what he could mean.

"Your cheeks are white as chalk, there is a heavy line under your eyes, and your whole air is that of a woman worked to death."

"James what nonsense!"

"It is not nonsense. I wish it was. Five years ago you had the complexion of a child, as clear and rosy as Susie's. Your eyes then were bright, full of animation. You had young children, a house to keep in order, and just half our present income. Yet you could find leisure then for a daily walk, could enjoy an occasional evening of social pleasure, or some entertainment. I had a wife then."

"James! What do you mean?"

"I mean that in the place of my happy, healthy wife, I have a sickly overworked seamstress. Those dolls that have just gone out have none of the grace of childhood. They are fast becoming little pieces of vanity, all absorbed in their finery. Their under-clothing would do for a case in an emporium of linen, with embroidery ruffle and tucks."

"But I do it all myself, James."

"Exactly. You are stitching your life into the garments of children who would be far happier, healthier and better in the simple clothing suited to their years."

"You are so old-fashioned, James. You would not have your children look like frights?"

"You know as well as I can tell you, that I like to see them neat and clean, but I do not like to see them dressed life fashion-plates at the expense of your health."

"Oh, I am well enough. I am pale today because I sat up late last night. But I must dress for church, or we will be late."

For the children, for Mr. Henley, by the advice of his physician, was going to take his wife to the ocean air.

The pain in the side had become very troublesome, and there was a little hacking cough that meant wakeful nights. The pale cheeks were seldom tinged with a healthy color, and the eyes were languid and heavy. People spoke pityingly of Mrs. Henley as "quite an invalid," and her husband mourned over the alteration of his wife.

He insisted upon having a physician, who advised fresh air, and exercise, and a tonic. And Abba obediently swallowed the tonic, took a daily walk, and then made up for "lost time" by stitching far into the night. For were not the Goodwins, the Wilcoxes, and all the leading fashionables of L—— going to the same hotel where Mr. Henley had taken rooms, and could Jennie, Susie and Lotta have one inch less ruffling and tucking than they possessed?

Mr. Henley protested in vain. If he sent a seamstress to help his wife, it only gave an excuse for a dress or two more to be made, and he finally gave up the attempt to bring Abba to a more reasonable ambition. He was an affectionate husband, a kind father, liberal in providing for his family, but his salary was not sufficiently large for him to rival the expenditure of the fashionable friends Abba had made. It was entirely vain to tell him that it was in his wife's favor that she could, upon smaller means, dress herself and her children as well as any in L——. He obstinately maintained that his wife's health, her companionship, her interest in his pursuits in the books he read, her music and her sweet voice in singing were far more valuable than twenty-seven flounces upon Jennie's dress or fifty tucks in Lotta's skirt.

Still he endured as patiently as might be the loss he deplored of Abba's bright interest in what had interested both. He tried to admire the really exquisite specimens of needlework brought for his inspection.

He only shrugged his shoulders when his little girls minced along with dainty, fine-lady airs, instead of bounding with the freedom of childhood. He bore the steady whirr of the sewing machine in the evening, instead of the voice or music of his wife.

But when Abba's health began to give way, he exerted his authority, and found he had been silent too long. The love of dress had grown stronger, and the ambition that had taken so deplorable a path could not be put aside. Abba submitted to all James' directions while he was beside her, and worked doubly hard when he was away.

But the summer wardrobes completed, the dainty bathing-dresses trimmed, the Saratoga trunks packed, Abba faithfully promised James to rest during their summer sojourn at the seaside. With a sudden consciousness of growing weakness, there came to her an appreciation of her husband's love and patience that had been numbed. She began to realize that she had let her ambition for dress overshadow her love for her husband, and that she had wronged him in depriving him of the companionship he had prized so highly.

"I will rest while I am gone, and when I come back, James, I will give my evenings to you, as I did when we were first married."

This was her parting promise never to be enacted. Only a few days' rest were allowed her, before an acute attack of lung fever prostrated her. James left his business to hurry to the seaside, a nurse was engaged, and medical skill did its utmost. But the constitution weakened by confinement and overwork, could not resist the disease, and while the summer days were in their full beauty, Mrs. Henley knew she was dying.

It was a bitter thought. Life held so much that was precious; her kind, loving husband, her beautiful children, her happy home—all must be left.

"A mysterious dispensation of Providence," said Mrs. Goodwin "such a good mother. And those children are just the age when they most need a mother's care."

But Abba Henley, in the dread hour when she bade farewell to hope, wound her arms about her husband's neck, and sobbed:

"If I had only listened to you, James, I might have been a guide to our children, a companion to you for many years, and when I died have left loving memories instead of a trunk of fine clothing. I have wasted my life."

And James Henley, in his widower's weeds, with his three little girls in sombre black beside him, wonder mournfully how many of the mothers of the land are wasting their lives in the same struggle for appearance.

The Maintenance of Health.

The maintenance of health is often more difficult than its recovery. Vitiated conditions of the atmosphere, unhealthy occupations, extremes of heat or cold, and constant exposure to rough weather, are all so many provocatives of disease. There is but one sure way of effectually guarding the system when thus subjected to influences prejudicial to health, and that is to establish, by judicious tonic and alterative medication, vigor of the body and regularity of its functions. The properties of an invigorant and corrective are happily combined in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, at the same time that it infuses unwonted vitality into the system, overcomes all tendency of the stomach, liver, bowels and urinary organs to deviate from regularity in the discharge of functions upon which the welfare of the other physical organization is dependent. Health cannot be more effectually maintained than by using the Bitters.
